The screenshot shows a search results page for 'eyetracking' on figshare. At the top, there are navigation links for 'Browse', a search bar containing 'Search on figshare...', and user links for 'Log in' and 'Sign up'. Below the search bar, the search term 'eyetracking' is displayed next to a magnifying glass icon. There are also 'help?' and 'x' buttons.

Below the search bar, there are several filters: 'sort Relevance', 'type Dataset', 'licence ANY', and a red '+ Follow this search' button.

The main content area displays a grid of 12 dataset cards, each with a small thumbnail image, the title, author(s), and publication date.

A note on scooping

- › Scooping means that someone “steals” your research while you are still finalising it
- › that fear is by and large unwarranted
- › you can count yourself happy if anybody IS actually interested in your data!
- › most research actually struggles a lot more with a lack of interest to outsiders rather than scooping
- › preprint servers allow you to register your data and establish primacy

- › conceptually separate your data, code, and prose text
- › make sure you can replicate all steps of your analysis
- › ideally, specify automated pipelines for your analysis
- › do not hardwire data and code
- › use a citation manager
- › use a versioning tool
  - › local or university or cloud
- › use a preprint server

Legal sustainability

- › “Copyright” in the Anglo-Saxon countries
- › “Urheberrecht” in continental Europe
- › These are different!
- › Once you create something, you can decide who can use it and how
- › Choose wisely and be explicit!

- › Usage rights can be differentiated as follows
  - › geographical restriction (e.g. only for Germany)
  - › type restrictions (e.g. only for print)
  - › exclusive (no-one else has the right) vs. non-exclusive (other people may also get the rights)
  - › copyright transfer agreement (Anglo-Saxon culture)
  - › total buy-out

Copyright transfer agreement

TRANSFER OF COPYRIGHT

12. The Editor hereby assigns to the Publisher the full copyright in the Work, which assignment the Publisher hereby accepts. Consequently, the Publisher shall have the exclusive right throughout the world to publish and sell the Work in all languages, in whole or in part, including, without limitation, any abridgement and substantial part thereof, in book form and in any other form including, without limitation, mechanical, digital, electronic and visual reproduction, electronic storage and retrieval systems, including internet and intranet delivery and all other forms of electronic publication now known or hereinafter invented. The assignment of copyright shall include the name of the Work and any additions and alterations in the event of a revision.

Contracts

- › Publisher contracts restrict everybody, including yourself
- › once you sign away your copyright, you have no longer the right to use your own material
- › to reuse tables or graphics in subsequent works of yours, you must first ask the new rights holder for permission
- › chasing rights is incredibly annoying
- › publishers will put your content behind a paywall, meaning that it can actually be more difficult to access once it is officially published than before
- › publisher vary as to whether and when they allow books to be hosted in repositories

The main function which is difficult to substitute remains certification of quality.

Dissemination

- › Universities want to hire good researchers
- › The amount of research produced by all candidates combined is too much for the committee to read
- › The committee use some proxy to judge quality: the brand of the publisher or the journal
  - › good publishers, regular publishers, bad publishers, ...
- › NB: quality selection is done by the (unpaid) editors, not by the publishers
- › the quality selection process is more or less the same for all publishers

- › Once a publisher is perceived as prestigious, a self-reinforcing loop starts:
  1. researchers present better manuscripts to the publisher
  2. the publisher has more material to choose from
  3. the average quality of the publisher gets better
  4. prestige goes up
  5. start over
- › Crucially, there is not necessarily more work being done by prestigious publishers
- › But since the brand is owned by a company, they increase the prices beyond proportion

Proofs by a prestigious publisher

24 Oppenrieder (1991, S. 261) und Hoffmann (1997, S. 440) gehen davon aus, dass die Sätze in
 (20) Sätzen mit Korrelaten entsprechen:

- (i) a. Doch es ist egal, was noch passiert.
 b. Es ist interessant, (zu erwähnen,) dass ...

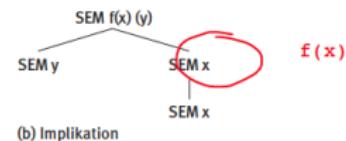

Erweitert man Sätze wie (i.b) mit Adverbialien, stellt man fest, dass der kopulalose Satz genauso markiert ist, wie der mit dem Adjektiv im Vorfeld:

- (ii) a. Es ist selbstverständlich/im Grunde genommen interessant, dass ...
 b. ?Selbstverständlich/im Grunde genommen interessant ist, dass ...
 c. ?Selbstverständlich/im Grunde genommen interessant, dass ...

Wären Abfolgen wie Interessant, dass ... Ellipsen von es ist, würde man erwarten, dass (ii.c) so unmarkiert wie (i.a) und nicht so markiert wie (ii.b) ist.

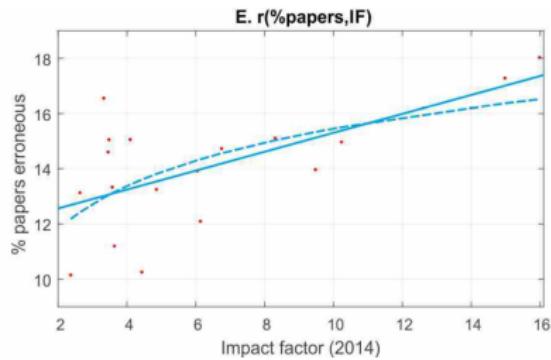

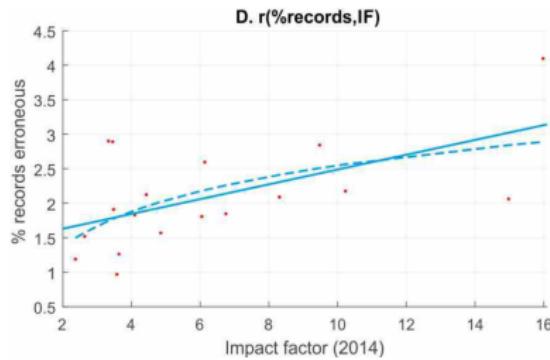

Eine alternative Erklärung für den Unterschied ist, dass es sich bei Adjektiv+dass-Satz um ein konventionalisiertes Muster handelt, das einfach keine Modifikation zulässt. Das würde auch erklären, warum auch andere Abfolgen von Adverbiale und Adjektiv wie z. B. (iii) nicht möglich sind.

- (iii)* Interessant selbstverständlich, dass ...
 Dazu später mehr. Zur Diskussion der Adj+dass-Satz-Muster siehe Günthner, 2009, S. 151.

It's the employability, stupid

- › Being employed as a professor between 40 and 65 years gives you 3 000 000 EUR income.
- › It is economically rational for each individual researcher to spend 5 000+ EUR for an article in Nature if this improves your chances of becoming a professor
- › It is economically rational for Nature to charge as much as they can since they are a public company
- › But this sucks money out of research, which could better be used to improve teaching, fund postdocs or develop vaccines.
- › Two solutions:
  - › decouple research evaluation from the place of publication (DORA)
  - › move the brands from the for-profit-sphere to the non-profit-sphere (Fair OA)
